10. Supporters contend the Arizona law is a necessary response to combat a list of problems they believe are caused by illegal immigration and the federal government's inability to secure the border, while opponents say the law will lead to racial profiling and that it will negatively affect the rights of individuals, both legal and illegal, in Arizona. Do you agree more with the supporters, the opponents or do you think they both have a legitimate position?

Others argue that immigration policy and any immigration reform must come from and be regulated and enforced by the federal government. Do you think states should be allowed to make and enforce their own immigration laws, or should this be left to Federal jurisdiction?
