Siena College Poll:

Obama Widens Lead Over Romney to 24 Points

Seen as Better on All Issues, Obama Scores High on Terrorism & Health Care

Plurality of Voters Says U.S. Is Worse Off Today Than it Was 4 Years Ago

Large Majority Says Election Provides Clear Choice Between 2 Visions of the Future

Loudonville, NY. President Obama has increased his lead over Mitt Romney to 24 points, 59-35 percent, up a little from 57-37 percent last month, according to a new Siena College Research Institute poll of registered voters released today. Big majorities say that Obama will do a better job than Romney on keeping the country safe from terrorism, fighting for middle class families, tackling health care, resolving Social Security and Medicare, and improving the economy. Obama also bests Romney on creating jobs, making the federal government work more effectively and addressing the deficit, albeit by smaller margins.

A plurality, 44 percent, of voters say the country is worse off today than four years ago, while 30 percent say it’s better and 25 percent think it’s about the same. When it comes to how their families are doing compared to four years ago, 44 percent say about the same, 32 percent say worse and 23 percent say better. Voters are optimistic about the future with 52 percent saying the country will be better in four years than it is today and only 15 percent saying it will be worse, with 20 percent thinking it will be about the same. Six in ten voters say the upcoming election is a clear choice between two visions while one-third say there is little difference between the candidates.

“New York is showing no indication of moving away from its solidly blue status in presidential elections over the last two and a half decades. President Obama has consistently led Governor Romney by 20 or more points over the last several months, and he now has a 24-point lead, including a 15-point lead among independent voters,” said Siena pollster Steven Greenberg. “Obama has the support of 83 percent of Democrats and 53 percent of independents, while Romney has the support of 72 percent of Republicans.

“Obama leads by 46 points in New York City, 12 points upstate and six points in the suburbs. He has a two-to-one lead with women and a 15-point lead with men. Romney trails by six points among white voters and Obama has the support of 96 percent of black voters and 79 percent of Latinos,” Greenberg said. “Interestingly, there is no ‘age gap,’ as Obama leads by 23 points among 18-34 year-olds, and 22 points among those 55 and older.”
“Overall, voters think Obama will do a better job on eight issues. He scores highest on fighting for middle class families, keeping the U.S. safe from terrorism and tackling health care,” Greenberg said. “Independents somewhat favor Romney on three issues – jobs, deficit and making government more effective – and they favor Obama by small margins on the economy and Social Security and by large margins on terrorism, health care and fighting for the middle class. Democrats give Obama the nod on all issues by margins of between 47 and 73 points, while Republicans say Romney will do a better job on all issues but by smaller 27- to 64-point margins.”

Do Voters Think the Country and their Families Are Better Off Now Than Four Years Ago?

“More voters, 44 percent, think the country is worse off today than four years ago, compared to 30 percent who say the country is better off and 25 percent who say it’s about the same,” Greenberg said. “An overwhelming majority of Republicans and 49 percent of independents say the country is worse off today, while 43 percent of Democrats say the country is better off.

“On the famous Ronald Reagan quote, ‘are you better off today than you were four years ago,’ voters are divided. Forty-four percent say they are about the same, 32 percent say they are worse off and 23 percent say they are better off,” Greenberg said. “Both campaigns have to wonder about the mood of voters. Will they think the ‘glass is half full’ – only one-third of voters thinks they are worse off today than four years ago – or do they believe the ‘glass is half empty’ since only one-quarter of voters think they are better off today than four years ago?”

Most Voters See Election as Clear Choice Between Two Distinct Visions

“By 61-35 percent, voters see this election as a clear choice between two distinct visions for our future rather than believing there is little difference between Romney and Obama,” Greenberg said. “Democrats are more likely to see a difference than Republicans. Potentially concerning for Obama partisans is that voters under 35 are split down the middle on this question with 48 percent each seeing a clear choice and seeing little difference.”

This Siena College Poll was conducted June 3-6, 2012 by telephone calls to 807 New York State registered voters. It has a margin of error of ± 3.4 percentage points. Data was statistically adjusted by age, party and gender to ensure representativeness. Sampling was conducted via random digit dialing to landline and cell phones weighted to reflect known population patterns. The Siena College Research Institute, directed by Donald Levy, Ph.D., conducts political, economic, social and cultural research primarily in New York State.
