

SIENA COLLEGE

welcomes

Emily Provance Traveling Quaker Minister

“Election Violence Prevention: Applying International Best Practices to the United States”

Tuesday, October 15th, 2024
Rosetti Hall 120
4:30PM to 5:30PM

Emily Provance is a Quaker traveling minister and an associate of Good News Associates. As a traveling minister, she works nationally and internationally across and between existing institutions, helping diverse groups of people work together on things they all care about. Her projects have ranged from support for parents of young children during Covid isolation to restructuring international organizations for long-term financial sustainability with local (rather than U.S.-centric) leadership. Her current work centers in addressing the social conditions that lead to election violence. She helps ordinary people from across the political spectrum learn and apply best practices for keeping elections peaceful.

Co-sponsored by: The Franciscan Center for Catholic Studies, The Political Science & International Relations Department, the Religious Studies Department, the Peace Studies Program and the Social Work Department

